First JP Porchfest to feature diverse acts

Jamaica Plain. The neighborhood is hosting its first Porchfest this weekend, not unlike Somerville's event.

With its plethora of residential homes and triple-deckers and its lively arts scene, Jamaica Plain seems like a natural fit for a "porchfest."

And that's exactly what will take place this weekend when musicians take to the small, open-air stages and perform free for crowds and passersby.

JP's inaugural Porchfest kicks off at noon Saturday.

"We want this to be a real JP event to really speak to what all of JP is in terms of the kinds of people who live here, and one thing we believe very strongly is that music touches people in a very strong way," said Mindy Fried, who along with Marie Ghitman, is organizing the neighborhood's Porchfest.

If the event sounds familiar, that's because it probably is. Somerville, another community known for its abundance of triple-deckers and musicians, has held porchfest since 2011.

Fried said the inspiration for the Jamaica Plain edition came in part from Somerville and the nearly two dozen other communities across the country that hold the event. They're all different, Fried said, and the Jamaica Plain one will feature a diverse group of performers playing all across the neighborhood in an effort to get people out to places they don't normally visit.

As Fried and Ghitman started working on plans for the event they sought to keep it modest for the first year — anticipating three bands playing on three porches. However, once the event hit Facebook, the popularity skyrocketed.

There are now 60 performers and bands scheduled to play on 35 porches throughout the neighborhood.

One of the performers, Albino Mbie, will play Mozambican music with influences from jazz and R&B.

"It's going to be an amazing event in terms of culture, getting together and people will get to know what's out there," said Mbie. "Culturally and emotionally it's going to be very uplifting for JP and in general for the people who will be there to visit."

Visit Metro.us to see a list of performers and a map for Saturday's event.

Marathon. Jeff Bauman, fiancee have baby girl

Jeff Bauman, a Boston Marathon bombing survivor who lost both of his legs, has a really exciting reason to celebrate with his fiancee.

Bauman's fiancee, Erin Hurley, gave birth to a baby girl on Sunday, according to an announcement on Bauman's Facebook page.

"Jeff and Erin are proud to announce the birth of their beautiful baby girl, Nora Gail Bauman, born [Sunday]. Everyone is happy and healthy," the post said.

The couple earlier this year announced that they were engaged and expecting a child. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

Permitting hacks

City to host hackathon for Hub permits

The city said on Monday that it is hosting a hackathon, which it called the first ever HubHacks Permitting Challenge. It will take place Aug. 9 and 10 at District Hall in the Innovation District.

Nearly 100,000 applications are filed annually for more than 40 different permits that the city issues through its citywide permitting software system.

During the hack event, the city will unveil a new application programming interface to allow hackers to create custom applications that feed into the city's permitting system. The city wants tech experts to tackle certain issues that hinder the permitting process.

Registration for the event can be done online. METRO

Cops: Man shoots, kills dog after attack

A Saugus man is facing multiple charges after he allegedly shot and killed his dog when it attacked a child and others.

Richard Maltais, 50, faces charges including illegal possession of a firearm and animal cruelty.

Police said they were called to Maltais' home just before 1:30 p.m. Sunday for a report of shots fired. Maltais allegedly told officers his English Bulldog, a rescue, became aggressive and bit a 9-month-old baby and others in the home.

Saugus police said Maltais shot the dog three times in the head. METRO

Court. Testimony ends in Tsarnaev friend's trial

Following the testimony of an FBI agent, federal prosecutors and defense attorneys on Monday rested their cases in the obstruction trial of Azamat Tazhayakov, a friend of accused Boston Marathon bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev.

The 20-year-old is the first of three men to face trial for allegedly interfering with the investigation by removing a laptop, a backpack containing empty fireworks, Vaseline and a hard drive from Tsarnaev's dorm three days after the deadly attack.

Tazhayakov is accused, along with his roommate Dias Kadyrbayev, of disposing of the backpack in a dumpster behind their New Bedford apartment. Tazhayakov's attorneys have argued that their client never physically touched the bag.

FBI special agent John Walker led a search of the apartment four days after the bombing.

"In an effort to elicit truthful info on an immediate basis, I told him Dzhokhar Tsarnaev's life was effectively over, whether he was still living or going away," Walker testified. "I told the defendant that the defendant's life did not need to be over."

Tazhayakov agreed to go with authorities to a state police barracks where he was questioned, according to Walker, but hours into questioning he recalled Tazhayakov saying, "I'm beginning to think we're being held against our will."

"I told him he was entirely free to go, that there was a cab waiting out front," Walker said.

He also testified that both Tazhayakov and Kadyrbayev "simultaneously" told him that the backpack was put in the dumpster and removed by a truck the previous day.

Closing arguments are expected Wednesday.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Remaining silent

Tazhayakov will not take the stand in his own defense.

- Judge Douglas Woodlock reminded jurors of Tazhayakov's right not to testify, saying they should not let his decision influence their verdict.
- "The burden of proof in the case rests entirely with the government. The defendant doesn't have to do anything. He can look them straight in the eye and say, 'prove it.'" Woodlock told jurors.

Creativity. Kids make cute video to invite Obamas to school's anniversary

If presidential appearances are based on cuteness, these students have it locked up. / VIMEO

Students at Mather Elementary School, the nation's first public elementary school, are hoping to get the attention of President Barack Obama and first lady Michelle Obama.

The students, with the help of school staff, have created a Vimeo video asking the Obamas to attend the Dorchester school's 375th anniversary celebration next year.

"Mr. President, it's our big birthday; will you come visit?" asks one bright-eyed little girl, adding, "I'll play hopscotch with Michelle Obama!"

Another student praises the first lady, who "is known for her appearance on 'Sesame Street,' and it's a pretty good season this year, I have to admit."

Mather Principal Emily Cox said staff and parents have been preparing for the momentous celebration for two years, and since the president receives so many letters and emails every day, the school decided to "think outside of the box" and create a video that would allow him to hear directly from students.

"From the very beginning, we knew how much it would mean to our children if President Obama, the first African-American president, joined in the celebration of the first public elementary school in North America," said Cox, who says that although she hasn't yet heard from the White House, she's optimistic.

"We are hoping that if he does see this video ... how could he not come?" she said.

Hot stock sectors to watch now

For exclusive commentary, visit Metro.us/blogs.

My top students and I have each accomplished the seemingly impossible: having turned a few thousand dollars in savings into several million dollars all within a few short years. Everyone wants to know how to achieve the same kind of success, and so I teach my strategy openly to all those who will listen.

One of the most important rules to growing an account exponentially rather than just the typical 10-to-20 percent per year is to focus on the hottest stock market sectors, since to grow your account fast, you need fast-moving stocks!

Here are three of the hottest sectors I'm watching:

Up: The U.S. stock market is at all-time highs, and there doesn't seem to be anything on the horizon to stop the bullish rally.

Down: Brazil getting blown out in the World Cup saddened an entire nation and few could ever rejoice in the sadness of so many hundreds of millions of people.

Mobile Internet stocks

The growth in mobile Internet usage has exploded the past few years and the stock prices of companies benefitting from this trend have similarly exploded. Startups with no revenues or profits but booming user growth like Instagram and SnapChat have become worth billions in record time.

When looking for "the next big thing," be on the lookout for mobile applications and websites that are simple and fun, with wide mainstream appeal. Don't worry about pesky revenues or profits; it's basically a popularity contest.

Marijuana stocks

With more and more states legalizing marijuana, this sector was the single hottest sector in the entire world for the first few months of 2014. Things have cooled down a bit recently, as those initial gains could not be sustained, but I fully expect this sector to rise again in the future given the trends and popularity of this "medicine."

Signs of a comeback will include tremendous press and further legalization news, ideally grouped with uptrending stock prices in all of the most popular marijuana stocks.

Apple-related stocks

The hottest, most popular technology company on the planet has created a cottage industry of those who speculate on new products, from the upcoming iPhone to the rumored iWatch and products that could fundamentally change the health and medicine fields, transportation and home entertainment.

For buying Apple-related stocks, wait for specific product announcements and then act quickly once their new suppliers are confirmed. The stocks of those companies will benefit greatly in the coming weeks and months on hype alone.

What we're into this week

1 The U.S. stock market has pulled back some off its highs, which is very healthy. We can't go straight up forever without any pullbacks!

2 PostMates is a great new app where you can now get restaurant delivery in the nation's biggest cities.

3 Yahoo! acquired RayV, a startup that focuses on high-quality video streaming. Thank God, we need much better video streaming technology!

1 The Internet hates Paltrow as Hepburn

Shocker: Gwyneth Paltrow did something that has people up in arms. The Goop guru got gussied up as Audrey Hepburn for a Max Factor makeup campaign to pay tribute to the "Breakfast at Tiffany's" star. And let's just say folks were not pleased. She also dressed up as Brigitte Bardot, Farrah Fawcett and her good buddy, Madonna, but no one seemed to mind that. Audrey Hepburn, though? Yikes. Here are some of the juicier reactions on Twitter:

@DestineeDouty: "She's not even half the woman Audrey Hepburn was."

@Jaspiehorn: "She's not pretty enough to be Audrey!"

@mariamzadeh: "Worst casting ever! Gwyneth could never play Audrey."

@lainieamber: "the funniest thing I have heard all day."

Gwyneth Paltrow does her best Audrey Hepburn. But her best ain't good enough for a lot of Internet trolls. / MAX FACTOR

2 Is Heigl hard to work with? Let her answer

While presenting her new series, "State of Affairs," to TV critics this week in Los Angeles, Katherine Heigl was asked point blank about those pesky reports that she's "difficult to work with." Katie, don't do it! It's a trap! There is no good way to answer this! Oh drat, here we go: "I can only say that I don't see myself as being difficult and I don't intend to be difficult," she responded. "I think it's always important to everybody to conduct themselves professionally and respectfully and kindly. So if I have ever disappointed somebody, it was never intentional."

Here's the problem, Katherine. All anyone takes away from that answer is, "I don't see myself as being difficult," which just makes you sound more difficult, but also a bit affronted. This kind of public image nightmare you've had going on for a while now is like quicksand. The more you struggle, the worse it gets. No matter what you say about your reputation of being difficult, it will only reinforce people's idea that you're difficult. I don't necessarily know what the answer is. Maybe you should be more of a klutz in public or get a new puppy or something. Or just, you know, stop talking.

3 Another prince or princess in the making?

Prince William and Kate Middleton are getting a spare heir, as Middleton is reportedly pregnant with their second child. That is, if In Touch Weekly is to be believed. Oh, and the tabloid also says she's battling anorexia and "can't stop losing weight." The Duchess of Cambridge has apparently been canceling appearances and making emergency doctor visits. (They looked fine last week watching the Wimbledon finals.) Royal insiders insist that with first son George turning 1 this month, the couple are trying for another baby this summer.

What to eat while you read

Sometimes a book is too good to put down — even to go eat. And unless you're reading them on your beloved tablet, it's OK to get a little pizza grease or chocolate on the pages. Here, we pair three books with what you'll crave while you read them. The best part is the stories themselves are as delicious as the food. EMILY LAURENCE

Pizza

'Delancey'

by Molly Wizenberg

In "Delancey," author Molly Wizenberg's husband drops out of grad school to open a pizza place, even though he has almost zero experience in the restaurant biz. As you can imagine, there's a lot of pizza talk. Wizenberg's husband must taste a lot of pizza to learn how to make the perfect one. And Wizenberg — who is the food blogger behind Orangette — waxes about pizza in such vivid detail, you can almost taste the mozzarella.

Nutella crepes

'The Vacationers'

by Emma Straub

Chances are, you aren't escaping to Mallorca this summer like the Posts, the family in "The Vacationers." Franny, the Post family matriarch, makes big family meals, but there's one thing she hoards for herself: Nutella. She settles for spoonfuls, but you'll likely crave a crepe oozing with the chocolatey hazelnut spread.

Cheap wine and takeout

by Emily Gould

Former Gawker.com editor Emily Gould wrote this novel about two best friends who just turned 30. Life isn't exactly going as planned for either one. Whether you're currently experiencing your own late 20s crisis or, luckily, already have surpassed it, there's only one thing that can get you through a book about two friends who are growing apart (with one who is seriously behind on her student loan payments): cheap wine and takeout.

'Judex'

The Criterion Collection
$39.95

1 The term "superhero" wasn't coined until 1917, but they had been around before then. Louis Feuillade used early versions of them in his silent-era serials, including the titular star of 1915's "Judex" — a caped avenger who, rather than take down all criminals, works on just one: an unscrupulous banker who he imprisons. Newly out on disc, the 1963 remake crams the 12-part, five-and-a-half-hour epic and crams it into 97 densely nutty minutes.

2 Franju is best known for the bone-chilling horror "Eyes Without a Face," whose centerpiece is an extended experimental surgery scene. He was a stylist whose work, as Geoffrey O'Brien puts it in the set's liner notes, was like simultaneously watching a "documentary and a dream come to life." Plenty of weird, impossible events creep up — such as a scene where Judex rocks a bird mask — but they're presented with a deadpan naturalism that makes them seem stranger still.

The hero of 1963's "Judex" makes his entrance wearing a freaky bird mask. / CRITERION COLLECTION

Interview. Emmanuelle Seigner doesn't mince words about herself or about her husband, Roman Polanski.

Emmanuelle Seigner is nothing if not honest. The actress is getting raves for her role in "Venus in Fur," directed by her husband, Roman Polanski, in which she plays an actress clashing with a theater director (Mathieu Amalric).

"I think this is my first big great role," Seigner confesses. "Which is sad. But let's face it, it's true."

She does tear into the role of Vanda, who effortlessly slips in and out of the character for which she's auditioning.

She liked Vanda's un-realness. "She has a bag in which she has everything, like Mary Poppins. There's something not real about her."

"It's not realistic," she says. "Like 'Rosemary's Baby,' you don't know if it's all in his imagination. Or maybe [her character is] a goddess. Or maybe she's just a girl who wants to take revenge and give him a lesson."

How does Polanski treat his wife on the set? "He treats me like the other actors," she reveals. She says he doesn't confide in her on his artistic decisions — ever. "He's not a very talkative person. He's charming, but he doesn't talk so much about himself or what he's going to do. He just does it. He's not a word man, he's an action man."

That sounds similar to her own approach to acting: "I don't think about it too much. I just do it. My approach is not intellectual at all. I just learn my lines then I let myself do it without thinking too much."

"Venus in Fur" was also a chance to work again with one of her favorite filmmakers: her husband. "What I like about this movie is it's closer to [Polanski's] older movies, like 'Knife in the Water,' 'Repulsion' [and] 'Cul-de-sac.'"

It turns out that she's candid about Polanski's movies, too. When asked about his previous theatrical adaptation, "Carnage," she says, "'Carnage' is not a Polanski movie to me. It's very bourgeois. I think any director could have done that movie. It's a good movie, and it's very well-acted. But to me it's not the kind of Polanski movie I love."

When asked if she told him that, she replies, "Yeah!" Does he mind? "No, he doesn't mind. That's my opinion!"

For the record, she also doesn't like "Death and the Maiden," his 1994 thriller with Sigourney Weaver and Ben Kingsley. She cites "Rosemary's Baby" as her favorite, with "The Fearless Vampire Killers," "Cul-de-sac" and "Venus" not far behind. "His soul's back in this movie," she says.

Cayman Islands.
Touch a stingray, visit hell on Earth, and more awaits.

NOT THE USUAL CARIBBEAN VACATION

You won't have to fight spring breakers for a spot on the beach. / CHRISTINA PACIOLLA, METRO

Go to any Caribbean island and you'll enjoy white sand, blue waters, cold drinks and hot nightlife. But experience all that in Cayman Islands, and you won't be fighting for a hammock on the beach with college kids on spring break. It's the perfect tourist destination for the nontourist, and the main island — Grand Cayman — is small enough to hit all the main attractions during your week-long vacation, whether it's adults-only or with the kids.

Seven Mile Beach

Most of the main island's resorts are on the western shore of Grand Cayman, nestled on Seven Mile Beach. Bring your pets or do some grilling. Just south of the beach is the capital, George Town, where animal lovers must stop at Cayman Turtle Farm, a nature park and green sea turtle breeding farm. Reach into one of the center's many pools to pick up one of the reptiles; hold tight with one hand and use your other to massage its neck or head. For lunch, don't miss conch fritters at Guy Harvey's Restaurant & Bar as you watch the cruise ships dock.

Get historical

Take a morning off from the beach to stop by Pedro St. James, a historically accurate three-story reconstruction of plantation owner William Eden's 1780 home. A tour guide walks you through each room, sharing the history of the island and the site, which overlooks a lush landscape and mahogany trees. It also boasts some of the island's best ocean views from atop its limestone bluff. Chickens — whose ancestors are among the first animal settlers on the island in the late-1800s — roam the gardens.

Stingray City

Say you swam with stingrays on Grand Cayman — something you can only do in a few parts of the world. A speedboat, that you can help drive, takes you out to shallow sandbars in the North Sound of the island where the water is crystal-clear. Stingrays in their natural habitat — used to people swimming there and feeding them over the decades — glide through the water all around you, allowing you to feed them squid, hold them and even kiss them. You'll have snorkeling gear so you can see these creatures in action underwater. After your close encounter with the stingrays, Rum Point offers shipwreck diving, or just relax in a hammock.

Send a postcard

Go to hell!

One tourist trap on Grand Cayman that's a must-do is a 15-minute stop at hell. Ivan Farrington, known to the locals as Satan, will greet you with a "How the hell are ya?" while you shop for all the standard tourist kitsch — emblazoned with "I've been to Hell and back." Be sure to grab a postcard to drop in the mailbox outside the fiery red building so you can prove you visited hell. And for a small donation, snap a pic and get a cheek kiss from the Prince of Darkness. Make sure you take photos of the black limestone formations that look like they came from hell itself.

Live in paradise

The Londoner

The newest project from developer David Morritt, an English expat who fell in love with Cayman Islands more than 25 years ago, is The Londoner, a new line of luxury suites, all overlooking the water.

Morritt has really built up the island's east end, calling it "a jewel in the crown." The resort works with Interval International, which specializes in time-shares, and you can trade one for stays at other vacation spots worldwide.

The resort has two restaurants, a spa, tennis courts and a shopping center. Water sports are popular — you can snorkel around the dock at the island's only restaurant on a pier — and the infinity pool offers beach views.

If you end up not wanting to leave Cayman Islands, The Londoner is a more permanent way to stay. / PROVIDED

Horoscope

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Good fortune is within reach, and opportunities will be offered to you. Take charge of your life, your future and your money. It's up to you to control your destiny and find your way.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. It's a favorable time to move house or fix up your surroundings. Listen carefully to advice offered you, as well as to the concerns of those affected by your decisions.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. You will experience friction with a friend, relative or neighbor. If you stick to a set budget, you will be able to afford something you've wanted to do for some time.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Successful relationships depend on honest communication. Share your personal and professional goals. Talk to your superior about your ideas for useful changes to your workplace.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Consider other people's points of view. Overdramatizing your problems will not help your situation or persuade others to see things your way.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. You will become interested in something or someone that isn't good for you. Don't risk your position by being too aggressive or demanding.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Worrying about older family members will cause you stress. Keep a positive attitude in order to put everyone around you at ease. Do what you can to uncomplainingly make life more comfortable for others.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Don't brag. You will be questioned if you pretend to know more than you do. Listening to others can help you gain valuable information, enabling you to appear interested, concerned and easy to talk to.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. It's time to focus on your career. Trying to change the way others think will be a waste of time. Do your own thing.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Reach out to those with experience in your chosen field. You can turn your dreams into reality with the right network of people around you for support.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Success is the best revenge. Now is not the time to labor over what's happened in the past. Stand tall and do what you do best, and you will have the last laugh.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Quench your thirst for knowledge by learning more about interesting subjects. Some time devoted to doing research will be well spent. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Palestine can succeed with right priorities

Re: 'Violent cycle' (Metro, July 14) I agreed with most of what letter writer C. Hanson had to say, but have to object to his statement that Israel is denying Palestine statehood. Palestine could be an independent state tomorrow, if the Palestinians and their leaders choose to do so. However, they won't, as this will deny their leadership a convenient scapegoat for their own failures, along with their Arab "brethren," who also benefit from continued strife and violence. There won't be peace in the region until the Palestinian's love for their children is greater than their hatred of Israel (to paraphrase Golda Meir).
E. BLOCK, VIA EMAIL

In his letter, C. Hanson was correctly listing the "right" wrongs on both side of the Israelo-Palestinian (killing of teenagers, killing of civilians, denial of territories, of right to exist); then he had to use the term "Israeli gestapo." Now, that was wrong.
CHARLOT LUCIEN, VIA EMAIL

Court did right by phone users

The Supreme Court recently considered the question of whether police can search cell phones, particularly smartphones, of arrested suspects. The court got it right when it ruled on June 25 that warrants are required. The ruling goes a long way toward ensuring the privacy rights of all Americans. The decision in this case, Riley v. California, was unanimous. Correctly, all nine justices have recognized that people carry their entire lives on their smartphones. The court has recognized that times have changed and that these days a cell phone search "would typically expose to the government far more than the most exhaustive search of a house." If the Supreme Court decided otherwise, the government would be free to rummage through one's personal life.

Red Sox midseason grades

MLB. Boston is struggling as it hits the halfway point well outside of the playoffs.

The Red Sox have only five batters who quality for statistical records, which goes to show just how inconsistent their lineup has been in 2014.

No surprise, they've struggled to a 43-52 record at the All-Star break coming off one of the most surprisingly enjoyable seasons in franchise history.

The season may not be over yet, but it certainly has that feeling at eight games back in the wild-card race.

Metro takes a look at the key contributors on offense — those five mentioned above — and grades a disappointing first half.

MARK OSBORNE
@MetroNYSports
mark.osborne@metro.us

Mike Napoli

The Red Sox were probably expecting more than 34 RBIs out of someone hitting in the middle of the lineup, but all of Napoli's other numbers (.266 average, .389 OBP, 10 HR) are on pace with or better than he did last season. He needs to improve his .187 average with runners in scoring position.
Grade: B–

Dustin Pedroia

The 30-year-old keeps plugging away, though he's not at the same level he was a few years ago. He's bounced back from a June in which he hit .267 to a July where he is hitting .333. The power outage remains. He has two homers since May 11 and is on pace to hit fewer than last year's nine bombs.
Grade: B–

ORTIZ IS LEADING THE LEAGUE IN INTENTIONAL WALKS, PARTLY DUE TO THE WEAK LINEUP.
GETTY IMAGES

Xander Bogaerts

The Red Sox would likely rather use Will Middlebrooks or Stephen Drew in the lineup, but neither has deserved it. Bogaerts hasn't much either, though at least he's been healthy. He's shown a little bit of power (six homers), but little else to get excited about.
Grade: C–

BRADLEY HAS YET TO SHOW THE TALENT THAT MADE HIM A TOP PROSPECT.
GETTY IMAGES

Jackie Bradley Jr.

Fans, and probably the front office, were expecting much more out of Bradley in his first full season in the bigs. He's hitting .227 with just one home run. His power hasn't come at the next level and neither has his average. He's just taking up space now.
Grade: D

David Ortiz

The power remains for Ortiz (20 home runs), but the wear and tear may be beginning to show on the 38-year-old. After three straight years over .300, he's batting .255 and on pace for his worst season since 2009.
Grade: C
